The Murano Collection from Native Trails is a line of glass vessel sinks crafted by the famed artisans of Murano, Italy. "The demand for matte black continues to grow and we're working to add it to more and more collections as its elegant simplicity makes it a fit for any modern bathroom design," says Pien.

Sprangers agrees that matte black is being used more. "It's beautiful and bold all at once," she says.

Matte finishes in general are trending, McNeely believes. "People are utilizing the faucets to be more focal in the bathroom, and these matte finishes make them stand out," he says.

Variety in materials used can also create the unique look customers demand. Fireclay is being used to better execute the flat bottoms, straight lines and thin walls of many newer sink designs, McJoynt notes. "It is a slightly different material and process than vitreous china and the cost is a bit higher, but it allows some of these desirable design features."

Lacava notes, "The materials that allow a lot of freedom of expression are concrete, natural stones and marbles plus man-made materials, like solid surface and resins."

BOLD STATEMENTS

Each bathroom in the home has a unique and specific purpose, and the requirements of each space differ according to how they will be used.

Current design demands, however, mean that each must still feel connected to the overall design of the home.

"The new construction trends are to give the whole house a seamless design flow. This means all bathrooms follow the same design elements or feature complementary fixtures that fit the desired functionality of the space," Lacava says.

Bathrooms that visitors see are often where homeowners choose to express the individuality and flair they wish to project. "Guest baths and powder rooms tend to be the ones where people look to make more of a 'wow' statement...and think outside the box in terms of style, finishes [and] textures," Schroeder says.

"Typically, we see powder bathrooms being created around current trends," Sprangers agrees. "These are unique, one-off-type spaces where clients feel they can add more personality or do something bolder than they would usually do. These spaces may incorporate a different style of faucet or finish with a vessel sink using a unique material or pattern."

"As the bathroom most seen by guests, the powder room is a space where you can show off your personality," Kulig concurs. "People aren't as afraid to experiment and go big and bold in a smaller space as they might in a larger bathroom. Just like you would with artwork or wallpaper, you can make a design statement with your faucet or fixtures."
